Competing with private schools

New upscale facilities and free education drawing students in large numbers

M.L. MELLY MAITREYI
HYDERABAD
Sprawling campuses, beautiful facade, large and well ventilated classrooms, cheerful ambience and attractive furniture. The name, Backward Class Residential Schools now sound like a misnomer.

For the government schools that reopened from June 12 offering the much sought after English medium instruction to provide free education and boarding are on par with any corporate school or even better in some respects.

After the Telangana government decided to start one Residential School for BC students in every constituency to offer free education from this academic year, a GO was issued on February 7 this year to identify locations in every constituency. The BC Welfare Department had just 40 days to put everything in place.

Major challenge
Right from identifying suitable premises, procuring classroom furniture, providing infrastructure and recruiting principals and teachers on temporary basis as regular recruitment process takes time, it was a huge challenge to get 119 new residential schools get going at one go, admit official sources.

Upscale classrooms in BC residential schools • ARRANGEMENT

The Telangana region had only 23 residential schools and 10 junior colleges for BC students till June 1 and in just 40 days, 119 residential schools have been added.

A number of engineering college buildings and other college buildings that had been closed down and other properties identified by the respective district collectors were hired and made suitable for the residential schools. The government is paying close to ₹45 crore annual rent for the 103 leased buildings.

Of 30,000 students who got admission through entrance test in 5, 6 and 7 classes out of 1.4 lakh students, 25,000 students had joined so far.

Ready soon
The schools will be ready in every way by July-end as in some schools, furniture was still being provided and toilets constructed. It was quite a coordinated effort by the BC Welfare Residential Educational Institutions society with its limited staff, District BC Development officers of all 31 districts and the BC Welfare department. Principal Secretary G. Ashok Kumar visited 45 schools to ensure no shortcomings in facilities.

Bunk beds, dual desk benches, notebooks, textbooks, kitchen, dining halls, utensils were all being supplied. All the students would get free uniforms stitched to their measurements and shoes soon.

If providing physical infrastructure is one task, greater challenge has been to acclimatise the students to the new and upscale surroundings. "Students have left their homes for the first time to join the residential schools and are not accustomed to many facilities like toilets back home. We realised it and directed the staff to provide the students toilet training," sources said.

Every school has now toilets at the ratio of one for 10 students, cleaning and security staff. "From August 1, focus will be on academics and detailed academic schedules, daily regimen for studies, extracurricular activities, have been drawn."

TS turns a new page in education sector

CHANDRABHASARAO
HYDRABAD

The very name of Sarva Shiksha is a source of nostalgia for many of the bigwigs who worked in different fields in the past. It is because their memories are soaked with the name and they still continue to take pride in their state's education system of Nalgonda District. Residential education and the success of the concept in both government and private sectors, not only in Telangana, but in the entire Telugu heartland, were mainly due to the Sarva Shiksha. The first residential school set up by a state in independent India came up in the village, heralding a new phase in the education sector.

Thanks to the initiative of the then Chief Minister P N T Rao, the then Union Minister of Education who sought to address the educational needs of the region with social economic reforms, the residential education was started in 1971. The credit of establishing the first residential school goes to the late Sarva Shiksha leader who donated six acres of land for the residential school translating a novel concept into reality.

This was only the first step in the entire Telangana region for students aspiring for residential education in those days. A good number of officials occupying key positions in the state today were from Sarva Shiksha residential schools. Nalgonda District Collector, K Surendra Mohan is also one of them and he attributes all that he has achieved in his career to the opportunity he had to have his education in the State. He attributes the success of the schools holds out great hope for the BC students in the State. State would have a fair share youth qualifying for the all India services in the future. State would have a fair share more members than are adding faster towards the needs of residential education today. It is a change that propels and inspires students towards success.

Over 28,600 students enrolled in the 119 new BC welfare residential institutions, the State has given a massive push to infrastructure in the BC welfare. G Asok Kumar, Principal Secretary, BC Welfare Department, says the overall expenditure on the new residential schools is Rs 1,25 lakh to Rs 1.25 lakh on each student. The initial spending on the new institutions is in the order of Rs 48 crore, and the government is spending over Rs 2,380 crore to provide permanent buildings and with permanent infrastructure to the new residential schools.

As many as 103 of the new institutions have been provided with private accommodation. Initially, the institutions started functioning with three to four classrooms with 30 to 40 students in each class. Now there is a big change for admissions which will be in the order of 100 to 120 students in each class. Pending recruitment of regular staff by the CBSE, the State has decided to create and train on temporary basis from the Andhra Pradesh Education Service. The State has sanctioned in all 430 posts of teaching and non-teaching staff. The new institutions that came up under the Mahatma Jyotiba Phule Telangana Backward Classes Welfare Residential Educational Institutions Society, are also building out a big hope for children seeking quality education in English medium and serene ambience have all become a feature in all the 119 Mahatma Jyotiba Phule Telangana Backward Classes Welfare Residential Schools.

With the best infrastructure facilities, the BC Welfare Residential Schools are imparting quality free education in English medium along with boarding facility on a par with corporate schools. To ensure quality and high English medium education for students from backward classes, the State government had issued orders in February according permission to Mahatma Jyotiba Phule Telangana Backward Classes Welfare Residential Educational Institutions Society for starting 119 BC welfare residential schools.

And racing against time, the society officials selected buildings of private engineering and IIT colleges that were closed and started putting in the required infrastructure before starting the schools. "It was a Herculean task but we successfully completed it and started all the 119 schools on time," says G Asok Kumar, Principal Secretary, Backward Classes Welfare Residential Educational Institutions Society. After an approval from Chief Minister K Chandrababbar Naidu, the department would take up construction of new buildings at an estimated cost of Rs 2,350 crore and equal importance had been given for the infrastructure which would come up involving an expenditure of Rs 285 crore.

Demand grows for seats
The 119 BC Welfare Residential Schools starting next year will accommodate students for classes V, VI and VII and each class would be added every year. For admissions, the society received 1.50 lakh applications for the entrance examination. "Next year we are expecting 3 lakh applications," says A Rama Lakshman, Adviser to Government, Welfare. While there were 30,000 seats in 142 residential schools including the new ones, about 26,000 seats have been filled. Though the admission process for class V had

LURING EFFECT

- The State government has gone all out to bring in the desired change in institutions.
- BC Welfare Department has been tasked with the responsibility of giving a massive push to infrastructure in these institutions.
- The overall expenditure on the new residential schools is Rs 1.25 lakh to Rs 1.25 lakh on each student.
- The first would spend over Rs 2,350 crore to provide permanent buildings and infrastructure to the new residential schools.
- As many as 103 of the new institutions have been provided with private accommodation.

Empowerment of BCs begins here

It is a little while, but the child is on par with those in the best schools even in the private sector. Perhaps a few of the international schools charge four to five lakhs for providing high end infrastructure could be a match. Children who were in the rolls of the institutions till today are little over 60 per cent of those qualified in the entrance test and spent hardly two weeks in the new premises. But they began to identify themselves with the institutions and falling in love with their new environment. A cobbler's daughter, Anusha from Uppal who could not afford to go to a fifth standard was away from her parents for the past two weeks, but had a great time in the new school.

EXPECTATIONS RUN HIGH

Parents, expecting their children to do well in the new schools, are not disappointed. One day many of them are certain to qualify for the all India services. State service is also a possibility. The decision to start the new residential schools is entirely based on the responsibility of keeping the surroundings of the

At the first glance, one would think they are international or corporate schools. Well, there is every reason for people to think so for the bright buildings, spacious classrooms, sprawling green premises and serene ambience have all become a feature in all the 119 Mahatma Jyotiba Phule Telangana Backward Classes Welfare Residential Schools.

YOGA, SPORTS AND MORE

For holistic development, the society has equally focused on sports and games besides regular academics. Students begin their day at 5 am with meditation and yoga followed by prayer and classroom and the day ends at 9 pm after study hours.

It may be worth mentioning here that the BC Welfare Schools have surpassed the State average in the SSC results with more than 95 per cent clearing the examination. "I followed my father's advice and wrote the entrance and got the seat. The academics here are very good," Rakesh, a Class V at BC Welfare Residential School, Batasingaram, said. The society has appointed 119 principals and 750 faculty members in its schools.

State-sponsored residential schools for backward class children are a big hit

By Amarnath K. Menon

HYDERABAD

Satvika D., a Class VI student at the new BC Welfare residential school at Keesara in Malkajgiri district, was reluctant to go home when the school broke for Dussehra holidays on September 20. And she wasn't alone. Classmate P. Kiranmayee too wanted to stay back. The girls are doing well—learning, playing, living carefree lives, in a manner unimaginable back home. Satvika is the eldest of three children of an autorickshaw driver. Kiranmayee's father is a hamali (porter). They are among 28,560 girls and boys of backward class (BC) families admitted this June to 119 English-medium residential schools of the Mahatma Jyothiba Phule Telangana Backward Classes Welfare Residential Education Society.

Everything the child needs is paid for by the state government here. All that is required of parents is Rs 25 as a refundable caution deposit. Opened simultaneously on June 12, there is one such school in every Telangana assembly constituency. The first set of admissions are to Classes V, VI and VII, each with two sections of 40 students each. "Quality English-medium education helps boost self-esteem and confidence and prepares them to meet bigger challenges in life," says Chief Minister K. Chandrasekhar Rao, the brain behind the grand venture. Anticipating a scramble for admission, Telangana's backward classes welfare authorities conducted an entrance test to pick promising students from BC households earning less than Rs 2 lakh in urban areas (Rs 1.5 lakh in rural areas).

To have all 119 schools up and running from the same day was a gigantic task. "We relied on jugaad when we began scouting for buildings in February 2017. Each school needed at least 20,000 square feet. Only 16 government buildings were found suitable. So, what were once colleges of engineering, education and pharmacy were hired," says G. Asok Kumar, principal secretary, Backward Classes Welfare.

Everyone chipped in. The prisons department supplied classroom furniture and bunk beds, the handloom weavers cooperative the uniforms. The public service commission and Administrative Staff College of India, Hyderabad, recruited the staff to run the institutions. KCR's initiative has even impressed the Narendra Modi government, which held a meeting in Chennai on September 11 on ways to extend the initiative to other states. It's no original concept, though. In 1971, then chief minister (and later PM) PV. Narasimha Rao had started a similar initiative for SC and ST students.

The Telangana Social Welfare Residential Educational Institutions Society now runs 268 residential schools. Among its students is M. Poorna, the youngest girl to climb Mt Everest.

The initiative has its critics too. "It's just a populist ploy," says Bharath Mamidi of the Centre for Action Research and People's Development. "Now all the backward classes will want free education. The state won't be able to cope with the numbers." ■
